NOVEMBER 22-24, 2022

marinerenewablesconference.ca

As the global energy transition continues, it is clear that Canada and the marine renewable energy sector have an important role to play. Many solutions and renewable energy resources will be needed to decarbonize our economy.

Marine Renewables Canada's 2022 Conference will focus on how offshore wind, tidal, wave, river current energy can help power a sustainable and inclusive future in Canada and globally. From the production of green fuels like hydrogen to displacing diesel in remote communities and providing clean electricity to the grid, our marine renewable energy resources offer clean solutions that the world is looking for.

Over the course of three days, the conference will provide ample networking opportunities, feature insight from industry leaders and experts, provide information on market opportunities and industry activity, and foster a dialogue on key actions and critical next steps.

This year's conference will be fully in-person and consist of 3 days of activities, networking events, conference sessions & keynotes:

- Tuesday, November 22 - Members Sessions, Women in Marine Renewable Energy Event, Evening Networking Event
- Wednesday, November 23 - Conference Sessions & Keynotes, Welcome Reception
- Thursday, November 24 - Conference Sessions & Keynotes, Post-Conference Mixer

The Marine Renewables Canada conference represents the largest and most significant event of the year for Canada's marine renewable energy industry. We welcome and encourage other sectors to attend and discover opportunities to get involved in this growing industry.

Agenda and conference details will be updated on an on-going basis. For the most recent information visit the conference site.
